

Funding better education through partnership

TADS is a financial aid service that works with families and schools to create successful educational opportunities. Our mission is to simplify the financial aid application process for both the family and the school, making it easier for you to offer your child a superior education. We believe that by working together, we can maximize the potential of your school's financial aid program and start your child on the road to future success!

What is financial aid?

Financial aid is funding intended to assist students in paying for educational expenses and is most commonly awarded on the basis of financial need. The level of need is determined primarily by measuring a family's income against the school's total educational expenses.

Financial aid programs, common at most private schools, aim to diversify their student body and to give need-based students the chance to receive the best education possible, regardless of their financial circumstances. These programs share a common goal with you: to make a private education for your children more affordable.

TADS is your partner in the financial aid process.

We will guide you through applying for aid, presenting financial documentation, researching the school's aid programs, and understanding which questions to ask in order to make the most informed decisions. Step by step, we will help you navigate the financial aid process and make funding your child's education a reality.

How do I know if I qualify for financial aid?

If you feel that affording a private education may be a struggle for your family, then chances are you qualify for financial aid. Aid is awarded based on a variety of factors, not just income level, so take some time to research the programs your school has developed especially for families such as yours.

Tuition is not the only cost to consider. Remember that there may be additional costs for attending the school of your choice; uniforms, sports, books, trips, before- or after-school care, supplies, clubs, transportation, technology, etc. Attending a private school can be costly, and the schools recognize this. This is why they offer programs to offset these costs – and more than likely, your family can benefit from these programs.

So be proactive. Contact the schools you're interested in and ask them to send you their informational materials on financial aid, as well as an application. This is the first step toward providing a superior educational experience for your children.

How do I increase my family's chance of receiving financial aid?

The best way to ensure you receive aid for your family is to do your homework. Whether this is the first or the fifth time you're applying for aid, make sure you are well informed by asking questions.

Contact the appropriate person at each school you are applying to and familiarize yourself with the school's financial aid policies.

Make sure you communicate special circumstances and/or specific concerns to administrators and they will assist you in exploring options for your family.

Here are some questions you'll want to ask:

- What is the deadline for the application process?
- Are your school's admission processes and financial aid processes combined or independent of one another?
- Do I need to fill out additional paperwork if I own a farm, business, or additional property?

- Are my financial status and my ability to pay evaluated differently if I am separated or divorced? How so?
- Does the school provide full scholarships?
- Is there a minimum contribution required on the part of the family, or will financial aid cover all school costs?
- Do I have to fill out an application each year that I apply for aid?
- Aside from tuition, what other costs are included in annual educational expenses?
- What paperwork and documentation do I need to supply?

There may be more questions you have for your school's financial aid administrators. Take some time to consider these questions, write them down, and don't be afraid to ask. Your school is there to help you succeed in your efforts to fund your children's education.

How does financial aid help me afford tuition?

Pending the assessment of your family's needs, your school's financial aid department may recommend different strategies for helping you afford tuition. The most common form of financial aid awarded by schools is a need-based grant, which is allocated by the school's budget and does not need to be repaid. After the school reviews a family's application and requested financial documents, they determine the level of need by calculating the amount the family can realistically contribute to educational expenses. Grants are awarded to either supplement the family's contributions toward costs or to cover them in full. TADS will help you fill out this application form to your maximum benefit.

By working with TADS, we can help you uncover all the possible aid options for your family and greatly reduce your long-term financial obligation. Visit www.tads.com/familyresources for more payment options.

How do I get started?

Below is a step-by-step guide to applying for financial aid. TADS offers assistance throughout the process via our toll-free line, email, and online chat during business hours.

The TADS process:

1. Ask each of your desired schools if you need to submit a paper application or apply online at www.mytads.com. Be sure you know your schools' submission deadlines!
2. Gather information on family size, total income, amount of savings, amount of investments, amount of indebtedness, medical and dental expenses, any unusual expenses, and other assets such as home equity.
3. When filling out the application, be sure to inform TADS of which schools should receive your information. Please be aware that if a school you're applying to is not a TADS school, you may have to fill out additional forms. However, TADS is happy to send your information to any school you wish.
4. Submit to TADS – upload online, by fax or mail – any necessary personal financial information. The TADS online submission form utilizes secure, encrypted data and a helpful online wizard that make this the safest and easiest way to submit your information. If you fill out a paper application, we recommend you request the Parental Report as a record of your data.
6. TADS will review your application and help you identify discretionary income that can be applied toward tuition costs. TADS then submits a final report to your school.
7. The school uses the TADS report, and any other required information, to make its decision in awarding aid. You are then contacted with the results of your application.
